Joanna Frankel, MSW, LCSW-C of Frankel Care presenting.

Joanna Frankel, MSW, LCSW-C is a graduate of Towson University with a Bachelor in both psychology and gerontology. Joanna obtained her MSW from the University of Maryland, School of Social Work with a clinical concentration and a focus on Aging. Joanna has more than 20 years of experience in the long-term care setting and is passionate about supervising social work licensee candidates.

Dementia, delirium and depression often coexist in elderly clients. Failure to properly cognitively assess and recognize the differences and similarities between these issues can result in serious harm to clients. Delirium, often a medical emergency, needs to be recognized and treated immediately. Medical professionals may attribute acute cognitive changes to chronic cognitive disorders. This lecture provides a clear and simple approach to understanding the etiology, presentation and corrective actions necessary for managing this common co-morbidity.

Learning Objectives:

1. Describe two clinical features of delirium
2. Articulate three preventative nonpharmacological interventions for delirium
3. Identify two major features of dementia, depression and delirium that are similar
4. Explain two major features of dementia, delirium and depression that distinguish one from the other

The cost of the program is $20 for 3.0 CEUs.
